

Ask any bankruptcy attorney in California and they'll tell you the same thing: California has been hit hard – very hard – by the economic downturn that started at the end of 2007. Thanks to the long-inflated home prices, especially those around Los Angeles, when the housing bubble burst, much of it splattered all over California. With foreclosure rates in California some of the highest in the nation, each bankruptcy lawyer in California has seen clients they never expected to see walk into their offices.

The ripple effect from the housing market's crash has left its mark on nearly every industry in California, from Silicon Valley to sunny southern California.

Sonoma's Main Industry Faces Record Losses

In Sonoma County it's no different, and, as a Santa Rosa bankruptcy attorney could tell you, it will probably get worse before it gets better. In Napa Valley, 2010 is expected to be a year of record foreclosures for wine producers. Nearly 10% of producers currently say their finances are already “very weak” or currently “on life support” (Source: TheSpec.com).

Bankruptcy is hard enough without an attorney. Get help from a Santa Rosa bankruptcy attorney today and use their advice for your particular circumstances.

What will happen to the rest of Sonoma County when the wine industry crashes? In Santa Rosa, bankruptcy attorney offices know what will happen – they're already seeing record number of average, hard-working Santa Rosa residents forced into bankruptcy.

Don't Face Bankruptcy Alone

Filing for bankruptcy is not as easy as just filling out some paperwork and handing it over to a bankruptcy court. Besides the federal laws governing bankruptcy, there are also local bankruptcy rules put into place by each district court. If you don't know those rules, your filing will suffer.

The best strategy for a bankruptcy filing is to hire a local attorney. Santa Rosa residents, therefore, shouldn't hire just any California bankruptcy attorney, but should look specifically for a Santa Rosa bankruptcy attorney. A California in another city can certainly offer you good advice, and can guide you through the bankruptcy process, but do they know the quirks of the local judges? Are they familiar with the Northern District of California's local bankruptcy rules – those that went into effect in December 2009? A

bankruptcy lawyer

Santa Rosa bankruptcy attorney

, will certainly be familiar with the idiosyncrasies of the local court, and will stand ready to help you work your way through bankruptcy.

A Santa Rosa bankruptcy attorney will first take a look at your financial situation and advise you which type of bankruptcy you qualify for – Chapter 7 or Chapter 13. Chapter 7 is generally harder to qualify for than Chapter 13, but a Santa Rosa bankruptcy attorney

can make the difference in your eligibility. Once you've determined what kind of bankruptcy you're eligible for, your will walk you through every step of the process.

Santa Rosa bankruptcy attorney

Call (877) 427-2752 and schedule an appointment to consult with a California bankruptcy attorney and see which chapter of bankruptcy you qualify for.