

Bankruptcies in Southern California have risen in the past two years at an alarming rate, all thanks to the economic recession that has hit California disproportionately hard. In Riverside, California, for example, bankruptcy filings rose 55% between March 2009 and March 2010, and many California bankruptcy lawyers don't think these rates will slow down any time soon. Meanwhile, Wilshire Law Group is offering a new service, automated bankruptcy catcher, to help its clients find out if bankruptcy is a good solution for their financial problems. The 2005 changes to bankruptcy laws slowed down the rate of bankruptcy and nearly put some California bankruptcy attorneys into bankruptcy themselves. After seeing the new laws shrink the rate of bankruptcy in California, the spike in bankruptcies over the last two years indicate just how difficult this latest recession has been for average California residents.

Wilshire Law Group

At the center of the bankruptcy hurricane sweeping through Los Angeles and the rest of Southern California is Los Angeles bankruptcy attorney Michael Shemtoub and his Wilshire Law Group. As a California bankruptcy attorney who has served Southern California for many years, Shemtoub has seen first-hand the devastation the recession has wreaked upon average California families.

Shemtoub and the other lawyers in his practice are deeply dedicated to seeing their clients through a challenging financial time in their lives. The testimonials on their website certainly reflect this, with client after client thanking Shemtoub and Wilshire Law Group for making the difficult decision of bankruptcy much easier.

Wilshire Law Group shows its commitment to clients new and old through two main promises: first, new clients can discuss their case with a skilled Los Angeles bankruptcy lawyer during a free consultation. The free consultation includes helping clients decide if bankruptcy is the right solution for them, along with a free estimate of how bankruptcy might "increase" a potential client's credit score.

The second commitment Wilshire Law Group makes to its clients is a guarantee to return every client call within twenty-four hours. This promise is a major relief for clients who have grown frustrated with another California bankruptcy lawyer who never seems to be available to discuss their case or return phone calls.

The Relationship Doesn't End When the Paperwork is Filed

At the Wilshire Law Group, Michael Shemtoub and the other bankruptcy attorneys are dedicated to keep clients out of debt after bankruptcy. Even after their bankruptcy case is over, clients of the firm are invited to further their financial education by attending workshops devoted to consumer and business bankruptcy law. Some topics in the past have included:

- New developments in bankruptcy laws

- Credit reporting
- Credit scoring
- How to fight mortgage service claims

These helpful educational seminars demonstrate the Wilshire Law Group's commitment to its clients even after bankruptcy proceedings are over.
